Sanskrit Dharmavatara Sutta The 5 greatest of the 4th century (sanskrit) Dharmavatara is an extremely influential text among Indian yogism and yoga, which is considered an Indian classic. Among all the 4 major scriptures of Indian traditions and Tantras, the 5th edition has come out by far the most influential and useful to all the yogis everywhere. It is extremely popular amongst contemporary yogis and teachers of Indian yoga who are very well versed in Indian philosophy. This is the major version. In the beginning it was only the older teachers who understood it in a literal sense. The original was written down by the master teacher Gauravaghavadeva, and is the oldest and most important in classical Indian philosophical theory. This verse comes from Brahmacharya . In ancient times, the people knew Brahmacharya by studying it at their school, either through books, or by memorizing it in the Vedas . As they were not well-versed in Vedas, neither were they well-versed in their own philosophy. This is something that needs to be taught to everybody. The word Dharma comes from the Sanskrit word dharma meaning "truth or divine wisdom" . Since Brahmacharya was a sanskrit name, it was also the word for "divine philosophy" in Sanskrit which is very important for everybody. The book that gives the entire verse is also called The 5 greatest of the 4th century: Sanskrit Commentary on Dharmavamagupta Buddha's commentary : Dhamma Sutra, (18th century) : The fifth Vedic text. The last great work in Vedic Philosophy: Mahaprabhatika the Vedas (18th century) : The earliest work in Indian philosophy on the Vedas, which was published in 1838. A major contribution in the scientific science of philosophy . Many of Brahmacharya's statements are true. For example, that life begins from birth and cannot end till there is no more birth and that everything is created with the knowledge that it is already..
